(New York) The European Union and its Member States reiterated as political priorities the universalization and the entry into force of the CTBT at the informal General Assembly plenary meeting marking the International Day against Nuclear Tests. (New York)
	October 2016	The CTBT and its benefits figured prominently in a resolution on nuclear security and non-proliferation adopted by the European Parliament on 27 October 2016 (2016/2936/RSP). In the resolution, the European Parliament urged the remaining States listed in Annex 2 to the CTBT “to sign and/or ratify the Treaty with a renewed sense of urgency”.
	October-November 2016	The European Union and its Member States confirmed that the entry into force and universalization of the CTBT remained a top priority for the EU at the seventy-first session of the First Committee of the General Assembly. (New York)
	December 2016	The strong support for the CTBT was reflected in the European Union Member States' collective sponsorship and vote in favour of General Assembly resolution 71/86, entitled “Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty”. (New York)
	March 2017	In her speech at the 2017 Carnegie International Nuclear Policy Conference, the High Representative of the Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and Vice-President of the Commission, Ms. Federica Mogherini, stated: “North Korea’s nuclear tests shown once again how urgent it is to make the Treaty enter into force. Its Organization [CTBTO] has provided already the world with a truly global, hi-tech monitoring system for nuclear explosions —something that no single country alone would be able to do. Not only do we need to complete this global monitoring network, we must continue to argue for all countries — including this one, the United States of America — to move towards ratification. This would be an investment in America’s security, and in our collective security. The international community needs unity in its response to nuclear threats, to North Korea’s threats’. Holy See	September 2015	During his apostolic journey to Cuba, the United States of America, and in the meeting with UN Member States at the General Assembly at United Nations Headquarters, Pope Francis said that there was an urgent need to work for a world free of nuclear weapons, in full application of the NPT in letter and spirit, with the goal of a complete prohibition of these weapons. Archbishop Paul Richard Gallagher, Secretary for the Holy See’s Relations with States, underlined in his intervention to the 9th Article XIV Conference that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty can play a significant role in strengthening a “global ethic”. He added that the Treaty not only requires that each State Party undertake not to carry out, to refrain from causing, encouraging, or in any way participating in the carrying out of any nuclear weapon test explosion or any other nuclear explosion, and to prohibit and prevent any such nuclear explosion, as stated in its article I, the Treaty also requires the collaboration of all States Parties in the implementation of the Treaty’s verification regime, which is an effective deterrent to any type of development of nuclear weapons, as well as an important “early warning” instrument in civil and scientific sectors, one capable of providing a better response to natural catastrophes. He also affirmed that the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty will act as a cornerstone in the foundation of a global structure to support a nuclear weapons-free world and to guarantee cooperative security based on an ethic of responsibility. Archbishop Gallagher also said that the Holy See gives its full moral support to the solemn act of ratification as an indispensable aspect of the concrete realization of a culture of life, peace and prosperity which can ensure a better tomorrow. In his statement to the 59th General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, Archbishop Paul Gallagher said that it would be a very important sign to make real efforts towards facilitating the entry into force of the Treaty, which represents the best hope of stemming nuclear proliferation and is a key to progress on nuclear disarmament.
	October 2015	During the First Committee of the General Assembly, Archbishop Bernardito Auza, Permanent Observer of the Holy See to the United Nations, reiterated the words of Pope Francis at the seventieth session of the General Assembly that there is an urgent need to work for a world free of nuclear weapons, in full application of the NPT, in letter and spirit, with the goal of a complete prohibition of these weapons.

	June 2016	In his statement delivered on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, Reverend Monsignor Janusz S. Urbańczyk, Permanent Representative of the Holy See to the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty Organization, reiterated the address of His Holiness Pope Francis to the United Nations General Assembly on 25 September 2015, in which he urged the international community “to work for a world free of nuclear weapons, in full application of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, in letter and spirit, with the goal of a complete prohibition of these weapons”. He also underlined that the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty is one of the cornerstones of the juridical architecture painstakingly put in place to control the global threat posed by nuclear weapons and to move progressively and urgently toward a world free of such weapons. Specifically, entry into force of the Treaty was declared an essential complement to efforts that enforce and strengthen the NPT, as well as the implementation of the Treaty’s verification regime. He also reiterated the Holy See’s appeal to the remaining States whose ratification is necessary for the Treaty to enter into force “to demonstrate courageous leadership and a high sense of political responsibility at the service of the common good, and the promotion of a genuine culture of peace”, encouraging them to take the urgent steps necessary for the entry into force of the Treaty, which would be one of the best ways to strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation regime and to create the conditions for much more dramatic progress towards nuclear disarmament. In this way, entry into force of this Treaty would put in place a vital piece of a global structure to support a nuclear weapons free world and to guarantee cooperative security based on an ethic of responsibility. In concluding, he reiterated the importance the Holy See places on the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty.

	September 2016	In his statement on the occasion of the International Day for the Total Elimination of Nuclear Weapons, Archbishop Bernardito Auza, Permanent Observer of the Holy See to the United Nations, said that while firmly believing that the NPT remains vital to international peace and security and regretting deeply our collective failure to move forward with a positive disarmament agenda, the Holy See will continue to argue against both the possession and the use of nuclear weapons, until the total elimination of nuclear weapons is achieved. He also stated that the Holy See considers it a moral and humanitarian imperative to advance the efforts towards the final objective of the total elimination of nuclear weapons. He further said that disarmament treaties are not just legal obligations; they are also moral commitments based on trust between States, rooted in the trust that citizens place in their governments, and that if commitments to nuclear disarmament are not made in good faith and consequently result in breaches of trust, the proliferation of such weapons would be the logical corollary. In the statement of the Holy See to the 60th General Conference of the International Atomic Energy Agency, delivered by the Reverend Monsignor Antoine Camilleri, Under-Secretary for the Holy See's Relations with States, the call of Pope Francis to the United Nations General Assembly on 25 September 2015 was reiterated, when he urged the international community "to work for a world free of nuclear weapons, in full application of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, in letter and spirit, with the goal of a complete prohibition of these weapons". He also referred to the commemoration of the twentieth anniversary of the opening for signature of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, one of the key agreements of the global security architecture to control the threat posed by nuclear weapons and to move progressively and urgently toward a world free of such weapons. In this regard, he said that a very important sign would be to make real efforts towards facilitating the entry into force of the Treaty, which the Holy See considers as the best hope of stemming nuclear proliferation and which could be a key to progress on nuclear disarmament.

	October 2016	The Permanent Observer Mission of the Holy See to the United Nations delivered an intervention before the First Committee of the seventy-first Session of the United Nations General Assembly on agenda item 98(c), dedicated to “Nuclear Disarmament”. In its statement, the Holy See retraced the history of its call for a total ban on nuclear weapons and reiterated the “cry of humanity to be free from the spectre of nuclear warfare”. It also said that the notion of nuclear deterrence offers a false sense of security and an illusory peace, because lasting peace cannot be guaranteed by the maintenance of a balance of terror. It said for the NPT to be successful, nuclear-weapon States must divest themselves of their nuclear arsenal, rather than hold onto and upgrade them. The Holy See urged that the recommendation made by the Open-ended Working Group to negotiate a legally binding instrument to prohibit nuclear weapons be advanced and that the Comprehensive Nuclear Test-Ban Treaty enter into force rapidly. It also stated that negotiations on nuclear non-proliferation and disarmament be accompanied by negotiations on the balances, dispositions and reductions of conventional forces.
	December 2016	In the statement delivered by the Reverend Monsignor Antoine Camilleri, Under-Secretary for the Holy See’s Relations with States, on the occasion of the International Conference on Nuclear Security: Commitments and Actions of the International Atomic Energy Agency, the address of Pope Francis to the United Nations General Assembly on 25 September 2015 was recalled and the international community was urged “to work for a world free of nuclear weapons, in full application of the Non-Proliferation Treaty, in letter and spirit, with the goal of a complete prohibition of these weapons”. He also said that the Holy See is, therefore, most pleased to attend this Conference, thereby lending its support to advancing nuclear security.

	March 2017	The Reverend Monsignor Antoine Camilleri, the Holy See’s Under-Secretary for Relations with States, read a letter from His Holiness Pope Francis to Ambassador Elayne Whyte Gómez, President of the United Nations Conference to Negotiate a Legally Binding Instrument to Prohibit Nuclear Weapons, Leading Towards their Total Elimination, at the opening session of the Conference taking place at the United Nations Headquarters in New York. In the letter, dated 23 March 2017, Pope Francis encouraged participants at the Conference to work with determination to promote the conditions necessary for a “world without nuclear weapons”. He said that an ethics and a law based on the threat of mutual destruction is contradictory to the United Nations Charter’s call for the pacific solution of disputes and the development of friendly relations between nations. “We must fully commit ourselves to a world without nuclear weapons,” he said, through the full implementation of the NPT. Nuclear deterrence, he suggested, was inadequate to today’s principal threats to peace and security. He said peace, rather, must be built on justice, integral human development, fundamental human rights, protection of creation, participation in public life, trust between peoples, access to education and health, dialogue and solidarity. The total elimination of nuclear weapons, the Pope underlined, is both a challenge and a moral imperative. He said the common destiny of humankind requires the pragmatic strengthening of dialogue and the formation of mechanisms of trust and cooperation, and that dialogue should involve nuclear States, countries that do not possess nuclear weapons, military and private sectors, religious communities, civil society and international organizations. Pope Francis also reiterated that “We must therefore commit ourselves to a world without nuclear weapons, by fully implementing the Non- Proliferation Treaty, both in letter and spirit”. Archbishop Bernardito Auza, Permanent Observer of the Holy See to the United Nations, stated at the United Nations Conference to Negotiate a Legally Binding Instrument to Prohibit Nuclear Weapons, Leading Towards their Total Elimination, that it is incumbent on every State to do all it can to eliminate nuclear weapons, as mentioned in Article VI of the NPT, and its double obligation of nuclear non-proliferation and nuclear disarmament requires a clear obligation to destroy stockpiled nuclear weapons.

	May 2017	The statement by Monsignor Janusz S. Urbańczyk, Permanent Representative of the Holy See to the International Organizations in Vienna, at the first session of the NPT PrepCom, underlined that the Holy See urges all parties to make progress in relation to the many international instruments and processes: not only the NPT, but also the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, the New Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty, the Fissile Material Cut-off Treaty, as well as unilateral initiatives and other measures. But these steps, he said, are in themselves limited, especially in light of growing tensions, continuing proliferation, and the major modernization programmes of some nuclear powers. He said it is therefore vital that the nuclear weapon States renew the arms control and disarmament processes, in conformity with Article VI of the NPT. He stressed that a very important sign would be to make real efforts towards facilitating the entry into force of the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban Treaty, which the Holy See considers as the best hope of stemming nuclear proliferation and which could be a key to progress on nuclear disarmament. During a side event on humanitarian consequences of nuclear weapons at the NPT PrepCom, the Holy See reiterated what Pope Francis wrote in his message to His Excellency, Mr Sebastian Kurz, President of the Vienna Conference on the Humanitarian Impact of Nuclear Weapons, in December 2014: “I am convinced that the desire for peace and fraternity planted deep in the human heart will bear fruit in concrete ways to ensure that nuclear weapons are banned once and for all, to the benefit of our common home”. (cfr. Pope Francis, Message on the Occasion of the Vienna Conference on the Humanitarian Impact of Nuclear Weapons, 7 December 2014.)
